A short trip into the DoD Reporter's notebook this week as there was a change of leadership ceremony at the National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency that's worth mentioning. Letitia Long retired from government after 36 years, including the last four as the director of NGA. My colleague Jared Serbu has a must-listen to interview with Long before she left on his On DoD program.

Robert Cardillo takes over for Long, coming back to NGA after spending the last four years as the first deputy director for intelligence integration in the Office of the Director of National Intelligence. Part of Cardillo's job was to brief President Barack Obama every day on intelligence risks and actions.
